

WOODWORK 2017

Tutors: Garry Studd, Ruth Thompson

Classes centre around set projects designed to incorporate different learning processes. Tuning and sharpening of all tools is covered but as this can be a very time consuming process, tools provided will all be in a tuned condition.

All tools and materials are provided for the set projects and students purchase materials for subsequent projects. Students are responsible for personal eye and ear protective equipment which must be worn at all times while using machines.

Garry Studd has been a keen woodworker his whole life and was inspired at an early age by frequent visits to the workshop of Robert Thompson, the “Mouseman” in Kilburn, North Yorkshire. A graduate of the Sturt School for Wood, he now works to commission as a designer maker of fine furniture and enjoys transferring his instructional skills learned in different fields to woodworking.

Ruth Thompson had fulfilled a 20-year dream when she graduated from the Sturt School for Wood in 2015. With a 35-year long teaching career, Ruth had a long association with furniture making. Throughout the course at Sturt, Ruth had the opportunity to develop design thinking skills and learn new manufacturing techniques from pre-eminent practitioners.

“I have been pushed outside my comfort zone and encouraged to be a risk taker both in the areas of creativity and the acquisition of knowledge through experimentation. On a personal level, I have learnt about my strengths and weaknesses and developed resilience.”
